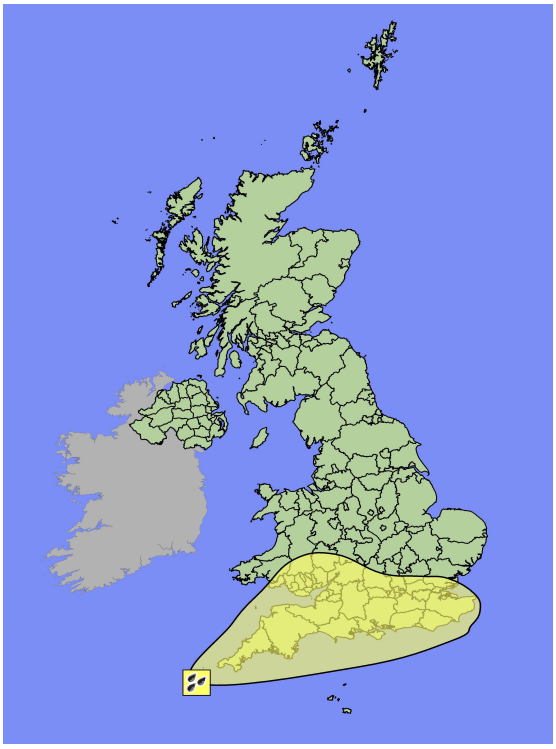
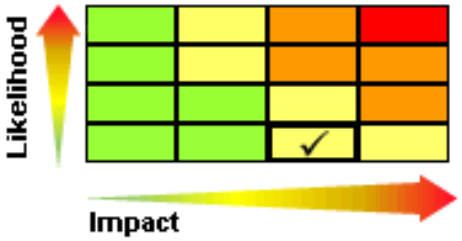
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Another deep low pressure system is forecast to track northwards over the UK during this weekend spreading gales and further heavy rain to areas already badly affected by wind and rain this week. Southern and especially southwestern parts of the country will again be particularly prone. 20-40 mm in 24 hours and locally 50 mm or more is possible together with winds gusting to 40-50 mph in some inland areas and locally 60 mph or more on exposed coasts.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Rain

Valid from 00:05 on Sat, 24th Nov 2012 until 23:59 on Sun, 25th Nov 2012

There is potential for another spell of persistent and heavy rain to spread from the south to affect the southern half of the UK over the weekend. This will also be accompanied by strong to gale force winds which could exacerbate any possible disruption.
The public should be aware of the potential for further localised flooding and disruption to transport. There is uncertainty in the severity and timing of the wind and rain and the areas affected and the public are advised to keep in touch with updates to this warning.
